How to stay motivated and maintain engagement in times of stress – Mr Colin Crookston, National Patient Safety Manager, Scottish Ambulance Service

Colin is a Consultant level Paramedic and National Patient Safety Manager for the Clinical Directorate of the Scottish Ambulance Service. Colin is currently undertaking a Clinical Doctorate at the University of Stirling with an interest in Risk Intelligence. Colin is a Fellow and serves as a Trustee (alternate) for the College of Paramedics.

Currently, Colin leads the Patient Safety Collaborative within Scottish Ambulance and is involved in a number of the Clinical Services Transformation work streams. Patient Safety with good judgement and decision making are key areas of his portfolio along with the design of safer systems of care. He is currently working with numerous work streams within the Scottish Patient Safety Programme.

Colin will be giving his insights of how to stay motivated and maintain engagement in times of stress through his lens as a pre-hospital clinician, leader and senior manager. Stay focussed, maintain compassion and be build resilience.
