Symposium

Maternal Medicine

Wednesday 4 December 2024

There are an increasing number of women entering pregnancy with a range of complex medical conditions. This biennial one-day symposium has become established in the RCPE calendar and attracts a wide range of participants from many parts of the world. The symposium will focus on medical problems in pregnancy and optimisation of their management. With expert speakers covering a broad range of topics and panel discussion of interesting cases, this is set to be an informative day.

Topics to be covered include:

- Acute cardiac presentations
- Most up to date guidance for diabetes care in pregnancy and evidence base
- Reducing health inequalities
- Liver disease with up-to-date guidance
- Dermatological problems in pregnancy
- Closed loop technology for diabetes in pregnancy
- Maternal critical care

Organising Committee Chair

Dr Claire Alexander, Consultant Obstetrician
Edinburgh Royal Infirmary

All grades of medical, nursing, scientific staff, allied health professionals and medical students are most welcome.
