The Public's Health after COVID: science and social justice

Online | Wednesday 14 April 2021

Fifteen months after COVID-19 arrived in the UK, the College has convened eminent scientists to describe how they experienced and sought to overcome COVID-19; and suggest how to build a better 'new normal' and prepare for future pandemics.

COVID-19: What do we now know?

- COVID-19: Epidemiology
- COVID-19: Human behaviour: from individual frailty to collective resilience'

COVID-19: How did we respond to growing (and at times misleading) evidence?

- COVID-19: Decision-making and public health
- COVID-19: Decision-making in clinical practice

COVID-19: What did we learn?

- COVID-19: International comparison of policies and outcomes
- COVID-19: Scottish response – past, present, and future

How has COVID-19 affected health inequalities

- Health inequalities and COVID-19
- COVID-19 and disadvantage

What opportunities does the 'new normal' offer?

- COVID-19: Opportunities for public health ethics
- COVID-19: Opportunities to improve well-being?

What other opportunities does the 'new normal' offer?

- COVID-19: Public health messaging during the crisis and looking ahead

Guest speakers include:

Prof Mark Woolhouse • Prof Stephen Reicher
Prof Linda de Caestecker • Prof Ewen Harrison
Prof David Nabarro • Dr Nick Phin • Ewan Aitken
Prof Sir Michael Marmot • Dr Vittal Katikireddi
